

Abstract

Actuators already present as an integral part of the control systems of missiles and the like are used to activate and control the deployment of fins and the like without the need for separate explosively or mechanically driven fin deployment systems. Springs located in hinges on the fins accomplish the complete deployment of the fins after proper orientation by the actuators.